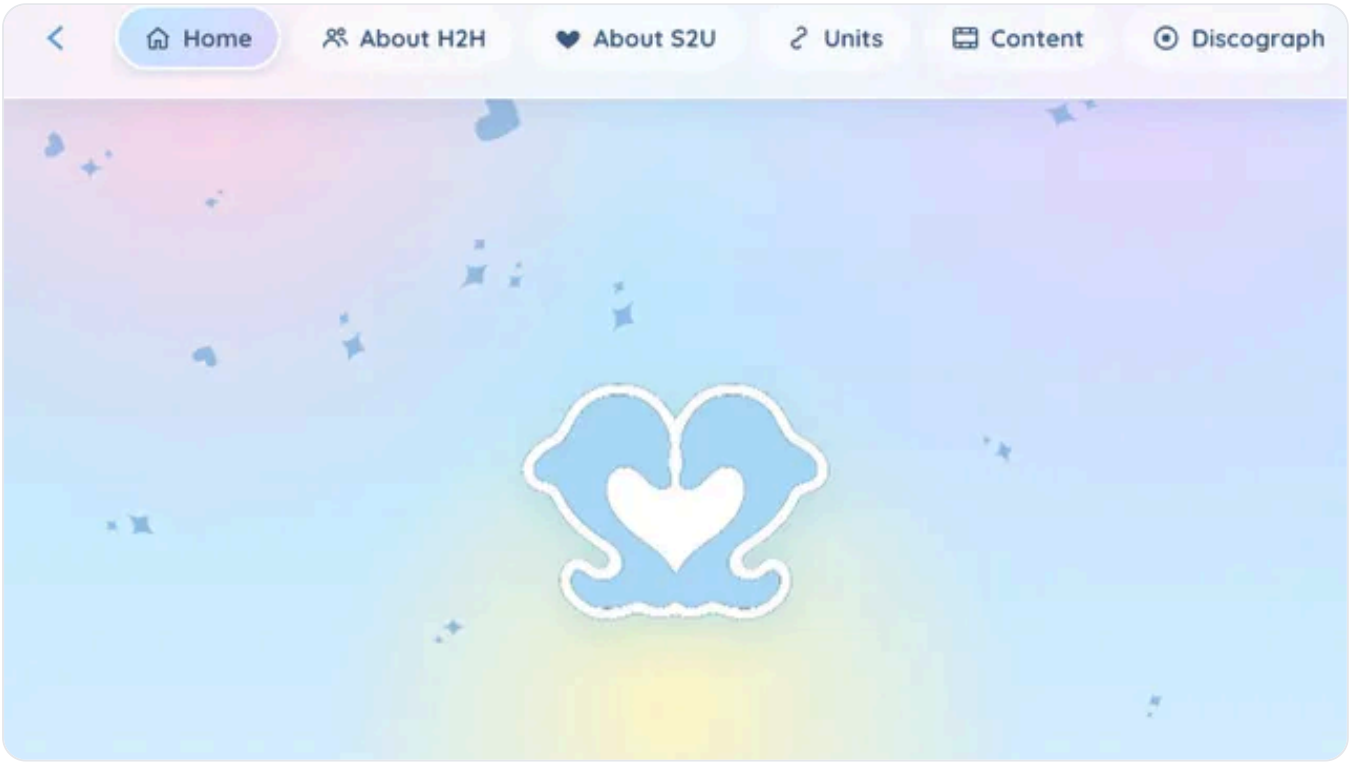
Heartquarters

An organized fan hub for Hearts2Hearts content, schedules, discography, and more.



About

Heartquarters is a Hearts2Hearts fan hub built to help S2U find group details, content lists, schedules, and other essentials in one place. It gathers fan-oriented reference pages into a simple web guide so you do not have to jump between multiple accounts, wikis, and posts to keep up with H2H.

What is Heartquarters

Heartquarters is a Hearts2Hearts fan hub made for S2U, the group's fandom. It collects reference material about Hearts2Hearts into a single site, with pages for group info, member details, content tracking, discography, schedules, achievements, a fan place to find Hearts2Hearts information without switching between many apps or sources.

The Heartquarters fan hub is maintained by one person, @juunjiu, which matters because updates, corrections, and missing entries can happen. The site also notes that some information comes from Hearts2Hearts official accounts and the Hearts2Hearts subreddit wiki, so it is best understood as a curated fan reference rather than an official source. For fans who want a quick Hearts2Hearts fan hub, it is designed to centralize the basics.

Key features

- Group reference pages: Heartquarters includes an About H2H section and member-focused information for Hearts2Hearts.
- Content masterlist: The site organizes content so fans can browse releases and related material from one place.
- Schedules and discography: It has dedicated pages for schedules and discography, which makes the fan hub useful for tracking activity over time.
- Fan utility pages: The directory includes a fan directory and a voting guide, both of which are practical for fandom participation.
- Arcade section: Heartquarters also has an Arcade page, adding a lighter fan experience beyond reference pages.
- Horizontal navigation: The site tells users to scroll the top navigation bar left or right to find pages such as About H2H, Units, Content, Discography, and Arcade.
- Single-maintainer structure: Because one creator runs the site, the Heartquarters fan hub may feel personal and curated rather than heavily automated.

How to use it

Open Heartquarters in a browser and use the top navigation bar to move between pages.

Scroll the navigation bar horizontally if you do not immediately see the section you want.

Start with the group info and About H2H pages if you are new to Hearts2Hearts.

- Use the content masterlist, discography, and schedule pages when you want a quick reference for releases and activity.
- Check the fan directory and voting guide when you need fandom-related links or participation help.
- Visit the Arcade section if you want a more playful fan hub experience after reading the reference pages.

The Heartquarters fan hub works best as a browsing tool, not as a database you can query with filters or search tools. Its value is in how it groups the most commonly needed H2H information together in a friendly layout.

Who it is for Heartquarters is for S2U fans who want a compact Hearts2Hearts fan hub. It is especially useful for people who are:

- new to Hearts2Hearts and need a quick orientation;
- looking for a content masterlist instead of digging through scattered posts;
- trying to keep up with schedules or discography entries;
- interested in fan-directory style resources;
- comfortable using fan-made reference material alongside official accounts.

It also fits casual visitors who want an organized overview of Hearts2Hearts without reading a long wiki first. If you prefer a visual, page-by-page fan hub over a more technical archive, Heartquarters is built around that workflow.

What to know before you use it

Heartquarters is not an official Hearts2Hearts site, so it can contain missing items, older entries, or small inconsistencies. The creator explicitly says the site is maintained by one person, which means updates may not be immediate and some sections may lag behind new activity. If you need exact, time-sensitive, or policy-related information, go back to Hearts2Hearts official accounts instead of relying only on this fan hub.

The Hearts2Hearts fan hub also depends partly on outside sources such as official posts and a subreddit wiki, so some descriptions are compiled rather than first-hand. That channels when accuracy needs to be guaranteed. For that reason, the site is best treated as a practical Hearts2Hearts fan hub, not as a replacement for primary sources.
